

LIES — THE ROAD TO THE EUROPEAN UNION

by Trevor Stewart

Before the 1900s, the elites had dispossessed and disenfranchised the people; left them to rot in the slums; conscripted them into their armies, and even rationed their food supplies during times of war. But just after World War Two, WWII, they had turned from abusing them to wanting to fully control them, and deny the people the chance to bring about a more natural and patriotic system. It was unlikely the elites could just kill off all of the working class peoples to attain a more manageable system; that would be noticeable and may lead to their own demise, so they set about attempting to control them and proceeded carefully by concealing their true intentions behind several organisations which would be sold to the people as “economical”. That’s important to understand, and the names of some of those organisations, that this article concerns and in which they created, for example, the European Coal and Steel Community, the ECSC; and the European Economical Community, the EEC, are clearly intended to be seen as “economical”. In the end, however, after our political “representatives” had completed the creation of the common market and internal market trading block, the true sinister nature of those organisations would be revealed.

The European Union has a long history of 64 years. And looking back from its origins in the 1950s to today, we can gage, easily enough, if it were good for Britain and the rest of the member states that joined or not. If we stack up all the irritating policies that the big political parties fail to talk about: forced multiculturalism; mass-immigration, that led to serious conflict including the events that unfolded in Norway; asylum seeking; out-sourcing of work; cheap imports that, by its very nature, deprive the natives of work; bedroom tax; stopping welfare and leaving the poorest to live on as little as £40s per week when the cost of living has rocketed over the past decades, then the road to the European Union has been a disaster, and the so called “war against the people” is irrefutable. I charge the European governments with being involved in a covert war against the European peoples, and that war is being fought on multiple levels: class; race.

Starting with the conference held at the Hague in 1948, the elites created a less well-known organisation, called the European Movement International and of the College of Europe, that was designed to encourage the future leaders of Europe to live and work together. It was identical to the Rhodes Scholarship organisation, that was founded in 1902 and based at Oxford, and I suspect one of its covert objectives was to eventually bring about the centralisation of powers within Europe.

Soon after the Hague conference concluded in 1948, two French elites: Robert Schuman, who was the French foreign secretary; and Jean Monnet, who was a civil servant, were the frontmen tasked with securing, among other things, this NWO objective of control through centralisation. Both men were involved in the creation of the ECSC, that was signed in 1951 at the Treaty of Paris, and came into effect in 1952, and the ECSC is instrumental to the eventual founding of the European Union in 1993; it is the source. The ECSC, therefore, was the first step, in a four step manoeuvre, towards achieving their two objectives. Bear in mind, however, that all the organisations I write of actually merged from one into the other. For example, the ECSC merged into the EEC, and so forth.

After the ECSC was established in 1952, in 1958 the European Economic Community, the EEC, was established during the 1957 Treaty of Rome; and by 1967 all associate ECSC organisations were amalgamated into the EEC. The EEC pertained to the exact same vision that had seen the creation of the ECSC: they sought to construct economic integration, however this only included the “inner six” founding member states---Belgium, France, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, and Western Germany---and I believe the creation of the EEC wasn't so much about the harmonising of trade, making everything fairer and stopping wars, etc., as Network-controlled Shuman may have us believe, but was really the second step towards controlling the independent European nations under one parliament and to create the “order out of chaos” environment that they require to justify building up their military or police state system. So with the benefit of hindsight, their next moves would now reveal their true intentions.

An interesting aspect of the NWO, that researchers failed to touch on, and a possible sign of them being controlled opposition, was the third step that had secured the first of the NWO's two objectives: the 1985 Shengen Agreement. This agreement, or treaty, signed on the 14th June 1985, was now about to give away what the elites were really pushing towards: a borderless Europe with the free movement of peoples---the first objective. Although this conflict-causing policy was limited to the Shengen Area at the time of its implementation, it would be enlarged over the course of the next decade.

The Shengen Area at its founding, and at the signing of the Shengen Agreement, consisted of these 5 European nations which were part of the ten member states that constructed the EEC: Belgium, France, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, and West Germany. The other 5 member states are: Denmark, Greece, Ireland, Italy, and the United Kingdom. The borderless concept of the Shengen Area, today, now consists of 26 European nations that have mostly abolished all passport and border controls; however, some have opt-out clauses.

If that weren't enough to prove that the European elites were networking together and were really wanting millions of unfortunate Europeans roaming all over Europe seeking a better life; jobs, more welfare and such, then the following data will. After the European elites had successfully brought about the single market in 1993, that is also known as the "internal market", they went on to allow, by the 1994 EEC agreement, for the "free movement of goods, capital, services, and people" within all of the the EEC, not just the Shengen Area. So by the free movement of people across the member states, we can, again, easily see how damaging that policy can be, and has been, and was their intention.

Emerging after this 1994 EEC agreement that set in law the free movement of peoples across Europe with or without border controls---the Network's masterplan to weaken the national, racial, and cultural identity of those unfortunate peoples who must now share their own nations with the rest of the world; and to usher in the incremental collapse of the nation to justify the construction of the police state---was another agreement that would leave no more doubts as to their intentions: the 1993 Maastricht Treaty. The Maastricht Treaty, that was the fourth and final step that had secured the second objective of the 1948 Hague Conference, which was: the European Union with its powerful *parliament---the second objective, had renamed the EEC to the European Union, the EU, and was also called the European Community, the EC. They changed the title, they claim, to "reflect that it covered a wider range than economic policy". So, here again, if you think carefully on what they're saying, one can easily see, in regards to why they built those organisations, what the elites' fundamental concepts were, which were: the two objectives.

Just to clarify my point and in conclusion, I believe the free movement of peoples and the European Union with its powerful parliament was the true and hidden intentions behind the creation of the ECSC in 1952, the EEC in 1958, the Shengen Area in 1985, and the Maastricht Treaty in 1993, and it was done to create conflict and chaos across greater Europe and to centralise power; and that the elites had lied to the European peoples by concealing both those objectives behind economical organisations and promoting those organisations as bringing economic harmony through their common market that would preclude war and bring the much-needed economic prosperity to a recovering-from-war Europe.

Not all of those policies were applied to all nations within Europe and at the same time, but it enlarged from the six founding nations---the "inner six"---of the ECSC in 1952, to where we are today, 2016: 26 members within the now named European Union. We still have border controls outwith the Shengen Area---Britain has an opt-out clause, but never enough to preclude immigrants because where as in the Shengen Area you can just go and live there without any visa checks, within Britain, the only difference is, you have to show your visa then you're allowed citizenship.

---*the European Parliament actually hails back to 1952, and was born to control the ECSC; it was then known as the Common Assembly. However, by 1993 it was much more powerful---
